FOR EXPORTERS

Your buyers may not know the name you use.

One product can be searched under several names. Each deserves a page.

THE PROBLEM

A buyer searches in their own words.

Senna is also sold as sonamukhi, sana makki and sanay. A buyer who only knows one of those names will not find a page that uses another.

CHECK THE DEMAND

Look at what people type.

Google’s autocomplete shows the names in use, for example “sana makki leaves in english” and “sonamukhi plant”.

Your Search Console shows which names already bring you impressions.

1 STEP 1 OF 3

Give each name its own page.

Lead the title with that name, and say plainly which product it is.

2 STEP 2 OF 3

Keep one set of facts.

Price, specifications and photos come from the main product, so every page says the same thing.

3 STEP 3 OF 3

Answer with a post too.

A short article for each name explains it in the buyer’s words and links to the product page.

THE RULE

Only names people really use.

A page that only swaps a word, with nothing new to say, is the kind of page Google treats as spam. Every name page needs its own reason to exist.

GOOGLE'S SPAM POLICIES, ON DOORWAY AND SCALED CONTENT.

FREE, IN UNDER A MINUTE

See where your site stands.

Our free check shows what Google and AI tools see on your website, in under a minute.

datapls.in/free-seo-audit